From the Director's Corner:

A phrase the you'll hear a lot around my house this time of year is, "Reading is reading." We all love participating in the library's Summer Reading Programs, and we get our reading in any way that we can. We read physical books. We read e-books on various devices. We listen to audiobooks in the car. We take turns with the kids reading to each other at night. My daughter even reads us a braille book once in a while. All of it counts for summer reading, and we sure do rack up the minutes!

Sometimes people ask me if audiobooks should really count as reading, or if magazines or graphic novels count. Some people think it shouldn't count if you aren't doing the reading yourself or if you aren't reading big blocks of text or if you aren't flipping the pages of an actual book. While not all reading is the same, all reading is still reading.

One of the best examples of this is a program that our library participates in called 1,000 Books Before Kindergarten. The aim of this program is to encourage all children to have read 1,000 books before they begin kindergarten, so that they have a strong foundation of literacy even before they get to school. But how are little children supposed to read before they ever start school? Lots of ways!

Obviously, kids can be read to. They soak up language like a sponge, and exposing them to a wide variety of stories at a young age fosters a growing understanding of phonics, vocabulary, diction, and story structure that are the foundations of literacy. Kids also learn a lot by flipping through picture books or following along as they are being read to. Some kids even like to chew on their books, which is probably less effective but always gets points for enthusiasm.

The point is, reading is good for young minds, and it doesn't much matter how that reading happens. It's also good for old minds and everyone in between.

If you haven't signed up for our Summer Reading Programs yet, it's not too late! Come and see us, or sign up online via Beanstack. We have programs for all ages, from birth thru adults. Reading is reading!

The View from Lake Como
by Adriana Trigiani

Lovers of Italy will rejoice for Adriana Trigiani's newest book, The View from Lake Como, set for release on July 8th, 2025.

The book is about a woman named Jess who rediscovers herself after moving to Italy. She slowly uncovers a family secret, while also honing her creative talents and discovering love. This is a perfect book for readers who love contemporary romance and women's fiction.

“ This is a perfect book for readers who love contemporary romance and women's fiction.

Trigiani began as a playwright in 1985 and wrote scripts for different television sitcoms through the 90's. Since the year 2000, she has written over 20 novels. Her previous book, The Good Left Undone, was released in 2022 and also took place in Italy. It looks at two different points in time of a family's history and the love that holds them together. She has also produced and written three movies based on her books.

If any of Trigiani's work interest you, please come to the Public Services Desk for help.

We're All Guilty Here
by Karin Slaughter

New York Times bestselling author Karin Slaughter has a talent for writing suspenseful, character-driven mysteries that are soon adapted for television. Slaughter's novel Pieces of Her became a Netflix series in 2022. Her Will Trent series became a hit for ABC, and Peacock is working on a series based on Slaughter's novel The Good Daughter.

“ [L]overs of psychological thrillers, filled with twists you don't see coming, and characters you can't forget, should be sure to check out this first book in Karin Slaughter's newest series.

This year Slaughter begins a new series with, We're All Guilty Here. Set in a small town in Georgia, the story begins at a 4th of July celebration where two teenage girls go missing. Slaughter describes the story as “a race to find out not just what happened to them, but why, and the value we place on young girls when they are in jeopardy versus when they're just living their lives.” Like Slaughter's previous novels, lovers of psychological thrillers filled with twists you don't see coming should be sure to check this one out.

Talking to My Father's Ghost: An Almost True Story by Alex Krokus

Talking to My Father's Ghost: An Almost True Story is award-winning cartoonist and animator Alex Krokus's debut graphic novel. Krokus uses his signature anthropomorphized characters to tell how his family dealt with the loss of his father following a battle with cancer. Over the course of a year, Krokus struggles not only with the loss itself, but emotions that arose during his father's life. Krokus wonders how things could have been different if his father had attended to his own health.

“ Through Jeffery's hilarious lectures and reminiscing, Krokus learns to live by the lessons he learned from his father and say goodbye.

Throughout the “almost true” story, Krokus is the only member of the family who can see and hear the ghost of his father, Jeffery. Through Jeffery's hilarious lectures and reminiscing, Krokus learns to live by the lessons he learned from his father and say goodbye. All at once real, funny, and poignant, Talking to My Father's Ghost: An Almost True Story will appeal to fans of Roz Chast and Lynda Barry. This title will be released on August 5th, 2025.

Tomorrow I'll Be Brave
by Jessica Hische

What better way to boost one's confidence than with empowerment and reassurance? Jessica Hische's beautifully illustrated book takes readers on an inspiring journey, filled with aspirations to be "adventurous" and "creative" for today and tomorrow.

Told in a first-person, poetic scheme, the story is filled with goals and optimism for the future. A curious rabbit reminds himself, "Tomorrow I'll be Brave. There's nothing I can't do!" Will he learn something new? His curiosity asking "Why?", "Perche?", "Zasto" in different languages has been expressed millions of times. He reassures himself, "Tomorrow I'll be all these things or at least I'll try my best."

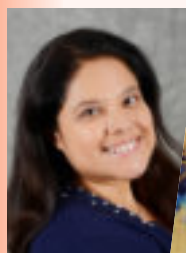

Hische's animated and colorful illustrations grab the attention of young readers with vibrant lettering and visuals. Whether learning, playing, or thinking, the uplifting message of "It doesn't matter if I win as long as I have fun!" encourages the reader with endless possibilities.

Tomorrow I'll Be Brave is a heartwarming and empowering story, perfect for young readers ages 2 to 5. With its positive words of wisdom, young readers are encouraged to be adventurous, strong, smart, curious, creative, confident, and brave.

A Language of Dragons by S. F. Williamson

London, 1923. For years, dragons and humans have been able to live side-by-side thanks to a peace treaty. Vivien Featherswallow just passed an important exam that saved both, her and her family from dropping down to Third Class. Viv is an impeccable student, she follows the rules and works hard. She should have no problem getting an internship studying dragon languages, especially when her parents invite the prime minister to dinner. It's the perfect opportunity to wow them with her fluency in multiple dragon languages and get an internship. That is, until Vivien's parents are arrested for colluding with the rebels against the government.

Vivien's world has spiraled out of control. Her parents wouldn't rebel against the government. Would they? Viv doesn't know what to believe, but she must free her family. Desperate and running out of time, Viv frees a dragon. In doing so, she starts a civil war. When Vivien is offered a job as a codebreaker to help win the war, she can't turn it down. Especially when her family is at stake.

Teen readers will have a difficult time putting this fast-paced, standalone book down! I recommend this for anyone who enjoys history, fantasy, romance, action, and betrayal. Check out your copy today!
